'Fallout from Reputational Damage could carry a High Price' - MEA

The Malta Employers' Association has called on the country's political forces to work towards a return to normalcy following the recent upheavals related to the assassination of Daphne Caruana Galizia. The MEA stated that: 'Prolonging what is evidently a crisis situation is doing nothing but harm to the country. Calls for justice and political responsibility need to be addressed at this critical time to minimise the fallout from the reputational damage which undoubtedly has been and is still being caused to the nation's detriment'. The Association added that this is the time for all those who believe in justice and cherish the national interest to rise above partisan gains and stand up and be counted, before the damage becomes irreversible and all Maltese society ends up paying a high price.
